A SCENE OFF BERMUDA.

The evening was closing in dark and rainy, with every appearance of a gale from the westward, and the wasther had become so thick and bointerous, that the Lieutenant of the watch had ordered the look-out at the mast-head-down on deck. The man, an his way down, had gone into the main-top to bring away some things he had loft in going atoft, and was in the act of leaving it, when he sung out,—"A suil on the whather bow."—" What does she look like?"—" Can't rightly say, sir; she is in the middle of the thick weather to windward."—" Stay where you are a little.—Jonkins, jump forward, and see what you can make of her from the fore yard." Whilst the topman was obeying his instructions, the look-out again hailed—"She is a ship, sir, close hauled on the same tack,—the weather clears and I can see her

Angra, (Tercaira.) Aug. 15.

Most Illustrious and Excellency my last despetch, in which I informed you that the greatest part of the blockading squadron had withdrawn, and had only left two brigs on observation, things remained in this state without alteration will the 20th of June, on the evening of which day there appeared to the eastward a great number of ships approaching the land, and on the following marring it was recognized to be the enemy's excellent, consisting of twenty-two axis—acreed and man of war, three frightes, two survettes, four brigs, four government transports, and several others of different sizes, some of them being armed. Hersepon I made my dispositions to give the enemy a proper reception, and having garrisoned all the accessible points of the bland, and stationed videttes on those of difficult access, I appointed the garrisoned of the eastles of St. John Baptist and St. Sebastian; I formed a flying column to occupy the acceptables. Sebastian; I formed a flying culumn to occupy the overlooking beights on the west-south-west and north-west parts of the island, and to support immediately any point which the enemy might show a disposition to attack on that part of the cuast, and united into a central column the principal parts of the forces, which I kept with use to march uses the first noist actions.

the principal parts of the forces, which I kept with me to march upon the first point seriously attacked, and to decide the victory.

"The block sling squadron, either because the calme, and the winds from the S. and S. E. which prevailed on the first days of their spearance, embarcassed their operations, or perhaps coulding in the false news and slanderous reports which had been wickedly spread, as a stile good spirit and disposition of this loyal puration, were waiting for internal disturbances to facilitate their enterprise; or, finally, in order to combine different means of attack, which they yet wanted, continued tacking on the S. and S. E. coast of the island until the 10th of August, having, on the preceding days, received Angust, having, on the brighting days, received from twenty to thirty open boats of different sizes, which were ordered from the island of St. George, and which were distributed amongst the different slips.

George, and which were distributed amongst the different ships.

"On the 19th of August, the wind having recred to the S.W., the whole squadron steered to the S.E., and keeping close to the wind, I parceived in the evening that the position they were in with respect to the wind enabled them to attack with a fair wind Vilts da Praya, and with a light wind the hays to the west of this city and castle. I then formed a new column, which with a few guns I directed to occupy St. Sebastian, to be able promptly to succour Villa de Praya, the garrison of which was confided to the brave battalion of the Queen's Volunteers, under the command of Major of Cacadores No. 9, Manuel Jusquim de Meiezes; and I ordered the Commandant of the definit to the left of Villa da Praya, Lieutenant Colonel of Infantry

At day break the following morning, the adron, are atter to conceal their designs and exercise, appeared close under had in front he bays to the west of Angra and the castle; but at full day the wind blew fresher, and showers observing the horizon, they suddenly changed their courses, and gliding rapidly along the coast, they suddenly appeared in the hay of Villa Prays, where the happy and glatious action took place, a description of which I submit to view Encellency, that you may be pleased to convey it is the knowledge of her Majnety.

"The size of the wind, was enabled to double the way of Prays, and the mists and showers which at that time obscured the horizon, concealed from the defineders of the bay of Villa Prays every movement of the heatile squadren, and only at eleven in the morning, when tle; but at full day the wind blew fresher, and

"The fort of the port began the fire, and was remediately answered by the man of-war and other stops of the squadron, which, continuing their mention, penetrated as far as the water allowed them, that anchor, took in their sails, and kept up without interruption a most vigo-

"The fort of the port, commanded by Ensign Simon Albuquerque, of the Infantry No. 3, following up has file with the greatest judgment (which the enemy thundered upon our batteries and intreachments with but hitle effect,) soon did considerable damage to the line-of-battle ship, destroyed part of her must and quarter-deck, and wounding many persons on board. It was therefore in ven that the enemy, by the increasest fire of a hundred against, tred to intimulate the Volunteers of the Queen Donna Maria II., who hitherte alone in the arthunus crises. were affected with so much impetuoity and violence; their affection was fixed upon the whole line of defence confided to them, and they waited with that sang feetd and sobordination which characterise true soldiers, and do honour to veterane; the development of the operation of landing.

Major Moneres immediately sent a part of his valunteers to support this point, uniting with it the force posted in the adjoining district, close to the base of the fort; and there trave soldiers, or more than the fire of the batteries on board, and from two gon-boats that protected the landing, commenced such a sharp and well directed fire of muskery, that they succeeded in driving back some of the barges, very roughly treates, however, the greater part of the enemy's force, casting themselves buddy, and at all rake, upon the rocks, and climbing the fort of Esparito Santo, which was now execusted, succeeded in throwing some men into the interior of that fort, which was now execusted, succeeded in throwing some men into the interior of that fort, which as few others further of got, up the cearp or slope. The design of the enemy was to gain possession of the fort, and the erect of the rock, to occupy with this force the heights on our left, in order to protect his ulterior operations; but the valour of the volunteers frustrated these plan, because, by climbing rapidly the height which communiate the fort, they jumped into it, bayonet in hand, and, dislodging their ettemies, precipitated them upon the rocks on which they landed, and thouselves garrisoned the erest of the scarp.

The enemy at this time, partly occupied by the destructive fire which poused upon their launches, and partly in launching a second column against the right flank of our line, withdrew their isunches on board, which left their first force, composed of the flower of their troops, and is most entirely consisting of greendiers and Oneadores, betwent the abyes of the sea and an inaccessible slope, guarded at the top by active fusileers.

"At this time the central column, which had caused to march at the trat indication of at-tack, after going over a great extent of read, assaulted in flank by the batteries of the line of-battle ship and frigates, entered Villa Prays, and the first column of the invaders, hereft of their commander, and other officers mortally wounded, attacked by a shower of balls, and iswounded, attacked by a shower of balls, and no-lated at the base of the scarp, were now com-pletely routed and discouraged, and the soldiers, exasperated, called out for the launches to re-curbark them; but they called in vais, and con-tinued to suffer from the continual fire from our side, while the ships played their artillery on the shore without ensing.

"May I be permitted to direct the attention of your Excellency to a spectacle which presented itself to me on my arrival at the field of battle—a spectacle the most aublime that can be witnessed in war, and which probably does not witnessed in war, and which probably does not present itself once in a thousand combata. The cannons of the squadron were playing upon all parts of Fraya and the adjoining hills; and our intle forts, with a very limited number of cannon, served by the coast artillery-men, were answering hundreds of mouths of flame, by which they were assailed; whilst on the height of the acclivity, the small line of volunteers were displaying simultaneously the greatest courage and the most subline generosity.

"The invaders, abandoned upon the rocks, unable either to extend themselves or to evenpe, and persuaded that we, imitating the orders which they had received, would refuse them quarter, were driven to exasperation—the holdest which they had received, would refuse them quarter, were driven to exasperation—the boldest fired to the top of the barrier, and, shortly wounded, sheltered themselves amongst the rocks which the sea was gradually invading, as the tide was coming in; and the less intrepid concealed themselves in the caves.

"The herrible condition of these unfortunate

"The barrible condition of these unfortunate men, dragged bither, for the most part, by the violence and tyranny of the Usurper, now moved the hearts of the generous volunteers, and seeing in conquered fees a band of unhappy victims, they called out to them from the top of the searp not to fire—to zurrender; that they had nothing to fear unarmed. They then fastened ropes and threw them down the scarp; others taking off their shoes, and descending in this manner down the rocks, gave their hands and drow their enemies from the abyss, who at length threw down their arms. All this was done by our brave follows, who would not suffer themsels ex to be perturbed either by the fire of the cannon and musketry, or the cannister-shot poured upon them from a brig, and conducting their prisoners thus made, they few again to their arms, binding up more than one wound with their handkerchiefs, which some had received. reived.

"As soon as the central column entered the field of battle, I ordered two companies of the fifth battalion of Cacadores to support the volunteers on the left; and I extended the rest volunteers on the left; and I extended the rest of the force along the right side of the bay, against which the eneuty was disposing his second attack. In effect, scarcely were my dispositions taken, when, under shelter of the manof-war and frigates, a second column was embarked, and the launches appearing in succession, threatened our right; but the first fire of our field srillerly from the battery, under command of Captain Vilaruho, having upset the first launch, and the next disordered their whole line, the launches drew back and covered themselves under the line-of-battle ship, whilst he cries of Victory resounded along our whole line.

"The rest of my stillery and the mortars now strived, having been delayed by the difficulties of the road, and the first greunds they threw threatened the squadron with a new danger. It was, however, now night, the tide was full, and the man of war, which at low water grounded, floated again; the calm which prevailed during the scening was succeeded by a light breeze. Then the commatder's ship, seethreattack on our right frostrated, complete-bandoned the flower of his troops which had a the attack on the left, made signals to he rest of our squadron, and the ships cutting heir cables in baste, sailed out of the bay and not to sea, which they would not all have effected if time had allowed me to bring to the satteries of Praya a greater number of pieces of large calibre, or if the mortars had reached us

" The enemy lost this day the whole of the the chemy fort his day the whole of the force with which they attacked our left, which influented, according to my observation and the eath of the prisoners, to from 800 to 1,000 men, of whom 383 were made prisoners, and the rest killed, for the most part, upon the rocks, and drowned, as opposin by the number of dead belies already cart ashore.

"They lost several efficers, among whom were Lieutenant-Colonel Azeredo, second in command of the expedition and commander of the first brigade, and Major D. Gil Eanes da Costa. The former of these officers, mortally wounded, was witness of our complete victory, but expired a few moments after, manifesting his surprise at the generosity with which he haw his courseder treated, and by which he himself was succoured. The enemy also abandoned the four gun-boats with which they had protected the landing. The loss sustained by the second column must have been very considerable, from the impossibility of saving the people of the latinches upset and destroyed. Finally, I learnt from the prisoners that many had been wounded on board ship, and among others Leutenant-Colonel Doutel, commandant of the second brigade, who was wounded by a splinter on board Colonel Doutel, commandant of the second bri-gaile, who was wounded by a splinter on beard the man-of war. We are indebted to our very attentive prrespondents of the New York Morn-ING HERALD, for the following most important and interesting intelligence:-

PEACE CONCLUDED BETWEEN RUSSIA & TURKEY. BY EXPRESS .- By advices from Bun-

un, which have just reached us, by a special Courier, we have positive intelligence that the treaty of peace between Russia and Tunkey is actually concluded and signed. The terms of the treaty, our account says, will be an evidence to the whole world of the moderation of the Emperor Nicno-LAS. They are based on the treaty of Ac-KERMANN, with a provision of indemnity to Prests, for the expenses of the war. The Tunking plenipotentiary immediately returned to CONSTANTINOPLE, bearing the treaty, signed by General DERRITECH, under powers vested in him by the Emperor, and escorted by 4000 Cossacks. The SULTAN instantly released all the Russians, prisoners of war, who are now on their march homeward.

A conspiracy had been detected at Cox-STANTINOPLE, against the life and power of the SULTAN, and five hundred of the old JANISSARIES lost their lives.

Our correspondent transmits the whole of this intelligence as positive and undoubted. No express from Paris to-day. The prices of the French Funds on Wednesday were-Five per cents. 107 20; Three per cents, 81 50.

Mr. Pearce's grocery store, at the South East corner of Third and Noble streets, was robbed last night. Mr. Pearce, who boards in the ouse, was away. About 11 o'clock some of the family heard a noise at the front door, and family heard a noise at the front door, and thought it made by the young man who attends the store. Opening a window, they saw a man run round the corner, but still suspicion was not excited. About two, the watchman observed. that the door had been forced; a padlock, which was the fastening, having been broken. He gave notice, went to the lodgings of the young man, and brought him to the store. On entering and examining, it was found that twenty or thirty dollars had been taken from the drawer, and a small quantity of goods was also missing

A robbery was also committed, on Thursday evening, in one of the stores on the north sid of Market street, below Fifth. The store had the watchman, employed by the merchants in that neighbourhood, discovered that a door, isming into a private alley beside the house, was unfastened. He procured a person to remain on the spot, while he went after the master of the store. When this gentleman arrived, an examination was made; and it appeared that a desk had several leaves of some of the account books destroyed.

An attempt was made, some time in the course of Thursday night, to break into the store of a very respectable firm on the wharf. When the young gentleman, whose first daily duty it is to open the counting-house, arrived yesterday orning, he found that a violent effort had been made to upen one of the shutters. The fastening was an iron bar moving on a pivot, and this, though very strong, had shewn a strong disposi-tion to yield, had a little more force been applied.

A few nights ago, an oyster shallop was sunk near Pine-street wharf, on the Delaware, by a contrivance so ingenious, that it deserves to be recorded. The boat had been made fast to the wharf at high tide, by a short rope, and was left in the evening safe enough, with her bowsprit poking over the edge of the wharf. As the tide fell, the stern went down, while the bowsprit kept the other end cocked up. So much water flowed in that when the tide rose again, the ves ed to rise with it, and was at last left completely submerged. Several hands were husily employed yesterday in trying to get her with what success we have not heard.

UNITED STATES' CIRCUIT COURT.

In this case, which was an indictment against the Defendant for certain acts of Piracy, made such by the laws of the United States and punishable with death, alleged to have been committed, in March last, on board a French brig called Le Clair, Junce Horenson delivered his charge to the Jury yesterday afternoon. It was altegether invorable to the prisoner's acquittal. The Judge commented as large upon the facts given in evidence, which, he said, admitted of but one inference, and that directly at variance with the prisoner's mnocence; but he was of opinion that the legal points raised by his counsel were fully maintained—that the court had no invisdiction in the case, inarmuch as the Acts of Congress did not provide for the punishnent of a crime like that charged against the defendant, committed by an American citizen on board of a foreign vessel on the high seas .-The Jury, after remaining together all night, brought in a verdiet in accordance with the charge of the Court, vis. that they acquitted the orisoner, "for the total want of jurisdiction in

The facts detailed in the opening address of the District Attorney, and generally substantia-ted by the evidence, presented what might be truly called a tale of horror, such as is not often heard in our courts of criminal justice, or warranted by the depth of human iniquity.

The Chesnut street theatre opens on Monday with an entertainment which promises well for be season. The choice of such a comody as the Honey Moon proves the manager's resolution at east to try whether success can be ensured by adhering to the established laws of genuine good taste. We had scarcely thought it possible that, since the inordinate increase of the number of theatres all over the United States has wrought such a scattering among the players, so many comedians of morit as form the cast of the co-medy could have been drawn together by any nanager. The piece will probably be as well acted, throughout, as it ever has been in Ame rica. These who may have seen the occasional notices, in this paper, of matter connected with the drama, however they may occasionally, perhaps frequently, have thought our judgment erroneous, will not suspect us of a disposition to puff that which has no real merit.

A TRAVELLER'S BRIEF NOTE ON ADRIANOPLE. Adrianople, the second city in the Byzantian Empire, lies on seven gentle eminences, and occupies the site of Uskadama, the ancient metropolis of the Beast. It was built by Adrian, and was named after that emperor; though by some it was styled "Orestia," an appellation which Mannert conceives to have been horrowed from Grecian mythology. It is well known in the annals of the Eastern empire, by the siege and devastation it underwent when attacked by Fritigern and his Goths in the time of Valence; by the pillage, to which it was doomed, when taken by the Bulgarians under Romanos; and by the passage of the Cussdors through it in the times of the Commence. In the East it is famed far and wide for the amenity of its situation, at the confluence of three rivers, one of which, the Hebras, is studded with gardens of roses and orchards of quinces, which yield an oil and extract of roses, vying with the choicest produce of Egypt and Persia. It is equally famed for its soap, quince-marmalade, sherbets, and confactionary; and though last not least, for the personal endowments of its imbabitants. The charms with which both nature and art have thus endowed it, have been specially and frequently commemorated by Tarkish bards, from whom it has received the name of the "City of Commotion;"—'a city, the beasty whereof, both as concerns herself and her indwellers, fills every heart with commotion!" Adrianople has been the cradle and last home of many a poet, dear to Turkish song; and this of itself is a circumstance which constitutes her principal attraction in the eyes of the Ottoman, who regards with singular veneration the strine of the plous and the sainted, the learned and the inspired; and holds in far inforior estimation, the palaces, buildings, markets, mosques, schoole, and bridges, of this, the second city of European Turkey.

sud noids in far interior estimation, the palaces, buildings, markets, mosques, schools, and bridges, of this, the second city of European Turkey. It was wrested from the scaptre of the Greek empire in 1361, being treacherously delivered up to Amurath I. Its present population is 100,000.

THE QUEEN OF SPAIN'S WEDDING DRESSES.

The superb troussess, which has just been completed in Paris for the young Queen of Spain, excites so lively an interest and curiosity among the Parisian elegantes, that we are happy in being enabled to furnish our English fermale readers with an accurate description of the principal articles of which it consists. The whole has been executed under the direction of the celebrated Madame Minette, who, in this instance, has evinced a degree of taste and talent which will not a little enhance the reputation she previously enjoyed in the world of fashion. The dress for the marriage ceremony is composed of British lace, and may be regarded as a perfect chef-d'auvre, both in design and execution. The skirt is trimmed with a very deep headed volant, above which bouquets are fastened;—the whole trimming ascending to the height of the knee. The bouquets which encircle the robe are also continued up the front, becoming gradually smaller as they ascend to the waist. The bosom is trimmed with a double fall of lace. most delicate needlework: among these there is one which presents a peculiarly novel effect. The robe is edged with a very broad hem, upon which is embroidered a beautiful pattern consisting of bunches of wheat. Above and below the hem is a lace flounce about half a quarter deep, and on the rose above the upper flounce, the embroidered bunches of wheat are repeated. All these dresses are made with short sleeves, but they have long wide sleeves to be adapted

Some are lined with pink and some with amber satin. One, which is intended to be worn over a lining of rose-coloured satin, is bordered with needlework of a Grecian pattern. It is made short, reaching very little below the knee, in the tunic form, and it is frimmed round the bottom with a very deep lace, which fills up the interval between the edge of the pelisse, and that of the satin under-dress. The sleeves and that of the satin under-dress. The sleeves are immensely full, and the collar consists of several descending points edged with needle-

Another pelisse is of figured India muslin, lind with vapour coloured satin, and fastened up the front with bows of vapour coloured gause ribbon. The waist-band consists of a shaded ribbon, and the ruche round the nack is interspersed with loops of the same ribbon.

Some pelisses of figured jaconet muslin are trimmed with a double row of needlework set on full. In general, a good deal of trimming, either of the accor needlework, is placed at the edge of the hem, which has a very pretty effect, and is

There are four heautiful cachemera dresses—one white, with a border of large palm leaves; another a sprigged pattern on a yellow ground, with a border of patners ariequins; a third puce colour, and a fourth white. These latter are both of striped patterns, and edged with a double row of palm leaves curiously shaded. The cachemera dresses are all made with full bodies and short sleeves ornamented with points. On Thursday the Wimington company of Washington Grays, under the command of Captain George M'Clung, agried in this city, in the new steam boat Minington. They were need at the steam boat landing by the battalion of Artillerists, under the command of Colonel Prevest, and the Lafayotte Light Infantry, under Captain T. W. L. Freeman, and seconted to Bush Hill, where they partook of a sumptuous dinner, by invitation from Captain Gillies's company of Jackson Artillerists. In the afternoon, the company was hospitably entertained by Brigadier General Patterson; and about five o'clock was escorted to its own quarters, the "Congress Hall Hetel," now kept by Mr. Wells, in south Third street. In the evening a large number of military efficers of our city attended their welcome guests to the Arch street Theatre. Extract of a letter from a gentleman of Savannah, who recently visited Philadelphia, to the Editor of the Georgian:—

'The Philadelphia Market is well worthy of a visit. Wednesday and Satur-lay are the principal market days, when the greatest quantity of produce is brought in. The market houses extend from the wharf nearly half a mile, but on the days mentioned, the carts and stalls, all filled with fruit, vegetables, &c. extend half a mile further. There is not probably a market in the Union better supplied in these necessaries. The different productions offered, which include every thing that can be required for deily consumption in a family, (chesse, bacon, salt fish, &c.) are of the best quality, especially the butter, and an appearance of cleanliness pervades the whole, even the brass hoops of the milk pails and churns, shining like gold with well bestowed labour. Females attanding meat stalls were to me a novelty.

"Of the public works of Philadelphia, there is none of which its inhabitants are more justly proud than those at Fair Mount, by which the city is supplied with water of the best quality, in the greatest plenty. Of those to whom Philadelphia is indebted for this great work, Joseph S. Lewis is particularly mentioned, as the originator, and the active prosecutor of the plan.—How different is the all important and generally beneficial objects of supplying this city with good and wholesome water attained, compared with the miscrable manner in which the city of New York is supplied by the Manbattan Company."

The Edgefield Carolinian of the 10th inst. says:—"We have heard frequent complaints from various sections of the Upper Country, of the rot in Cotton. From the luxuriant appearance of the Cotton in the early part of the searon, we were led to anticipate a large crop.—We have been disappointed. The rot prevails very extensively. We have understood from vavery extensively. We have understood from va-rious sections, that not much exceeding half a crop would be made. Under our immediate ob-servation, the disease in the cotton has been very destructive."

Daniel Houston, in the 21st year of his age, was drowned on Tuesday evening, by falling off the bridge, foot of Hamilton's reet, Albany; the bridge being crowded by citizens and coaches, as usual at the seamboat landing. He had just completed his apprenticeship at the goldsmith business, at Hanover, N. H. and had been in Albany about a week, on a visit to his brother, who is a resident in that city. Great exertions were made to recover him at the time of his fall, but they were ineffectual. His body was found early next morning.—Argus. found early next morning.—Argus.

Windsor, Oct. 10.— The steamboat Vermont, Capt. Blanchard, arrived here on Monday last, and was most cordially welcomed to our waters by our fellow citizens, as was demonstrated by the firing of cannon and ringing of balls, on that evening and the following morning. As a further expression of the kindly feelings of the people of Windsor towards Capt. B., and of their best wishes for the success of his patriotic enterprises, he was invited by them on Tuesday to a public dinner. On Wednesday, a party of between sixty and seventy ladies, gentleman and young persons, made an excursion up and down the river, in the Vermont, of some 35 or 40 miles; starting at about half past 10, A. M. and resturning to their respective homes before sunset, without any accident, or encountering the least obstruction to steamboat navigation; and highly gratified, we believe, with the apportunities afforded for so pleasant and healthy a recreation. We were before assured by those who had witnessed the movements of the Vermont, and are confirmed in this assurance by our own observation during the excursion, that this beat is well adapted to the river mavigation.—She stemmed the most rapid current between this and Sugar river bar, apparently, if we may so speak, without effort. It was the intention of Capt. Blanchard to have proceeded up the river as far as Haverhill, or Wells river, this fall; but it was found on examination that the lock at Quobec Falls was too narrow to admit the boat, and he has therefore concluded to return to Hartferd the first of next week. We are informed that a regular line of steamboats will commence runefforts will be made to extend it lartner up the river. We trust the inhabitants of the Connecticut River Valley will feel the importance of rendering these enterprising individuals every assistance in their power. That the river will, at some future day, be the channel of extensive commerce between the interior and the seaboard, we believe the seaboard and that it winds to be seasons to the seaboard. we believe certain; and that it might become a twenty years to come, we have scarcely less reason to doubt.—Rep. and Jour.

The Lost Chillo.—What is it that calls forth the better feelings of our nature like the intelligence in our neighborhood that a child has wanderer from its parents and is lost in the woods? If it is a mother who hears it, she knows full well the agonized feelings of the mother—if it is a father, he knows the silent but deep distress of the father—and if a brother or a sister, their liveliest sympathies are awakened. On Saturday evening last, it was sounded through the streets of this town, that the son of Mr. Harvey Bliss, aged between five and six years, was lost. He had gone out in the afternoon, in company with two other small boys, to gather chesnuts, at a place but a short distance from his home. Being frightened by the threats of some person, they run, became separated, and the two others returned home. An unavailing search by numerous citizens, continued till midnight, when the bells rung for a general alarm. At this time it was learnt that a child answering the description, was seen on the Chickopee road at eight in the evening. He was uperstoned, and having answered that he was a son of Mr. Bliss and going home, he was supposed to belong to a family of that name near by, and suffered to pass along. About sunrise on Sunday moraing, the little fellow was found asleep in a bye path near Chickopee bridge. His limbs were so much benumbed, and his feet so much swollow, that he was unable to stand during the day. When separated from his companions, he took a direction to-wards the U. S. Water Shops, and then turned and wandered towards Chickopee by the road across the plains, in the belief that he was going home; having, as is conjectured, travelled not less than twelve miles. He was a child not at at all prone to rove from home.

At the meeting on the 21st inst. on the subject of African Colonization, the following reso-THE LOST CHILD .- What is it that calls forth

A question was argued at the present October Term of the Court of King's Banch, held at Quebec, as to the rate at which Spanish dollars were to be received at the Custom House in payment of Dutiss. The Collecter refused to receive them at more than four chillings and four peace stering each, though for a great number of years they have been received at that port at the rate of four shillings and als pence. The statute of 14 George III. c. 85, passed in the year 1774, directs that the menion payable at the sustom house, shall be received and taken according to the proportion and value of five chillings and air pence the sunce, in silver. The Judges delivered their opinions acriesium, in favor of the Collecter. Chief Justice Sewell, considered this act as faing the standard of value for foreign coins; and observed that the value of a Spanish milled dollar, with relation to its actual contents in pure silver, as issued from his Majority's mint, is four shillings and four pence aterling.

CALUMNIES AGAINST PRINCE LEOPOLD. CALUMNIES AGAINST PRINCE LEOPOLD.
We understand that a gentleman of high rank, who is in the confidence of Prince Leopold, has prepared an article refuting the charges which have been brought against that illustrious for reigner, and that he is now only waiting for the permission of the Prince to make it public. We have been allowed to peruse a copy of this article, but of course we cannot at present divulge the contents. As the result of our own inquiry, however, we are able to correct a curious impression that has got abroad, of the Prince having regularly caused the fruit and vegetables of Clarement to be sold in Covent Garden Market on his own account. It appears that wagons bearing the name of Prince Leopeld, and laden with fruit and vegetables, have been seen in the market, and hence it was naturally concluded that they were there with the produce of Claremont. The fact, however, appears to be, that these wagons, being lighter than those of apreen in the neighbourhood, who sends regularly to Cavent Garden, they were lent to him by a person in the service of the Prince, but without his knowledge; and it is singular that, notwithstanding the length of time during which this has been going on, the discovery was only last week made by mere accident.
